The good stuff

Cups + spoons · Metric

The batter

erythritol 100 g · split 5 tbsp + 3 tbsp	½ cup
eggs 4 (size M)	4
salt	1 pinch
baking powder pinch for the whites	pinch + ¼ tsp
Magerquark (low-fat quark) 200 g	¾ cup + 1 tbsp
reduced-fat cream cheese 50 g · ~10% fat	3½ tbsp
milk 75 ml	5 tbsp
vanilla extract	¼ tsp
plain flour 40 g · Type 405	⅓ cup
cornflour 25 g	3 tbsp
icing sugar optional	to dust

Let's make a mess.

18 cm (7-in) springform, baking paper, foil, big roasting dish, hand mixer, mini chopper.

1. Run a bath.
   Oven to 170 °C (150 °C fan), rack in the middle. Set the roasting dish on it, ~3 cm hot water in. Line the springform base and sides with paper; wrap the outside tightly in foil.
   → Foil snug all round, no gaps for water.

2. Blitz + whip.
   Grind the 5 tbsp and 3 tbsp of erythritol to powder, separately. Separate the eggs. Whip whites with salt and the pinch of baking powder until stiff, raining in the 5-tbsp powder.
   → Stiff, glossy peaks that stay put.

3. Creamy base.
   Beat yolks, the 3-tbsp powder, quark, cream cheese, milk and vanilla. Mix flour, cornflour and ¼ tsp baking powder; stir in.
   → Smooth, no lumps.

4. Fold in the cloud.
   Fold the whites in, in three goes, with a spatula. Pour into the tin.
   → No white streaks, still airy.

5. Into the bath.
   Set the tin in the water bath. Bake 10 min, drop to 150 °C (130 °C fan), bake ~45 min more. Don't open the door!
   → Door shut the whole time.

6. Cool, unmould, slice.
   Cool completely, release from the tin. Dust thinly with icing sugar if you like; cut 8 slices.
   → Fully cool before slicing.

Our tweaks.

Amounts, times and temps are LECKER's. Cups are our approximate conversions; splitting the erythritol 5 + 3 tbsp before grinding is our no-scale trick.

Sugar instead?

LECKER says plain sugar swaps 1:1 for erythritol, no grinding. Then it's ~150 kcal and 8 g protein a slice (their estimate).
